SEVERE PUNISHMENT

Of Mrs. Chappell, of Five Years' Standing, Relieved by Cardui.

Mt. Airy, N. C.—Mrs. Sarah M. Chappell of this town, says: "I suffered five years with womanly troubles, also stomach troubles, and my punishment was more than any one could tell."

I tried most every kind of medicine, but none did me any good.

I read one day about Cardui, the woman's tonic, and I decided to try it. I had not taken but about six bottles until I was almost cured. It did me more good than all the other medicines I had tried, put together.

My friends began asking me why I looked so well, and I told them about Cardui. Several are now taking it."

Do you, lady reader, suffer from any of the ailments due to womanly trouble, such as headache, backache, sideache, sleeplessness, and that everlastingly tired feeling?

If so, let us urge you to give Cardui a trial. We feel confident it will help you, just as it has a million other women in the past half century.

Begin taking Cardui to-day. You won't regret it. All druggists.

What Life Insurance Companies Know About Drink

American medical directors of three great life insurance companies estimate that from seven to forty-three per cent of accidents are due, either directly or indirectly, to alcohol. Seven per cent of railway accidents, eight per cent of street car accidents, ten per cent of automobile accidents, eight per cent of those due to vehicles and horses, forty-three per cent of heat prostrations and sunstrokes, seven per cent of machinery accidents, eight per cent of all accidents in mines and quarries, thirteen per cent of drownings, and ten per cent of gun shot wounds, are sustained, either in whole or in part, because of alcohol.

With this in mind, the Pittsburgh Steel Company, employing five thousand and two hundred and fifty men at a monthly expense of three hundred thousand dollars, went so far as to address a letter to the license judge of county, protesting against the licensing of saloons. They said:

We have experienced a growing inefficiency and an increased carelessness in the mills, resulting in accidents and deaths, largely attributable to the excessive use of beer, whiskey and other alcoholic drinks. This evil has been growing rapidly, until our company has been compelled to impose restrictions on our men as to the use of liquors, with some beneficial results; but the safety of our men and the efficient conduct of our business cannot be attained unless a radical change in such habits can be secured.

The widespread use of alcoholic beverages has been conservatively estimated as causing the loss of twenty-one per cent in the efficiency of the nation's workers. The production of wealth is reckoned at about thirty-two billion dollars yearly; the loss due to deficiency (or diminished efficiency) in round numbers is therefore fully eight and one half billion dollars.

What the Heads of Business Say

Some months ago I wrote to the heads of insurance companies, industrial corporations, railroads, and colleges; also to safety experts, statisticians, and those who have made a study of efficiency and economics. Out of five hundred letters sent I received four hundred and three replies. I quote from a few of these, which are representative of the mass opinion. Practically the only voice which did not condemn alcohol in business came from a manufacturer of beer pumps. Mr. Francis Norie-Miller, of the General Accident Fire and Life Assurance Corporation, Ltd., writes: "I have come unhesitatingly to the opinion that the effect of alcohol on the human system is to degrade in every particular, mentally, morally and physically. Those of my employees who have indulged freely have, by a process more or less gradual, become absolutely useless. Poverty and misery in the homes have resulted. Their children I find weak, physically and mentally, and I feel that, not only for the sake of the present generation, but for the sake of generations to come, every community should have prohibition to the extent that it would be as difficult to obtain strong drink as to obtain strong poisons."

Ex-Senator William A. Clark adds: "The disqualification of persons addicted to the excessive use of alcohol was in my early experience so striking that I preposterously declined to take anyone into my service upon whom I could discern the effects of indulgence in alcohol. I look upon alcoholism as a disease which, as time goes on, insidiously and surely fastens itself upon the victim, so that volition is entirely destroyed."

Mr. Thomas D. West, chairman of the West Steel Casting Company and chairman of the American Foundrymen's Association says: "I am seeking assistance that would help me drive back saloons from manufacturing and industrial establishments. For the past five or six years I have been going through an experience that has been costly to our firm and injurious in creating an appetite for drink with workmen, but have finally ended it by buying the saloon which caused our troubles. This saloon was close to our office and gate entrance. We have paid four times the value of the property in order to become proprietors and close it up."

"I know of no greater injury and injustice that can be brought to a manufacturer than by having saloons close enough to be a standing temptation for workmen to stand out and obtain intoxicants. I am urging the American Foundrymen's Association to assist in persuading our state legislatures to pass laws that will absolutely prohibit the operation of saloons within five hundred to one thousand feet of any foundry, mill, or industrial establishment."

"I believe that if a vote of all workmen were taken, seventy per cent of them would favor keeping saloons well back from workshops, and would prefer the drinking of non-intoxicants during working hours and at lunch time rather than beverages that befog their brains. The readiness with which employees have taken to drinking milk sustains me in this belief."

Dr. Chas. W. Hitchcock, chief surgeon of the Standard Accident Insurance Company, informs me that: "Our long experience with all kinds of accidents claims has served to confirm the general belief that alcoholics do not present normal resistance, and that long-continued and persistent use of alcohol invariably so lowers vitality as very much to increase the length of disability resulting from accident."

Smelling of Whiskey on Monday

Mr. J. B. Mansfield, vice president of the J. E. Bolles Iron and Wire Works, says: "We have overcome the Monday morning nightmare by paying our men on Tuesday instead of Saturday."

"Forty per cent of our accidents are among men who take intoxicating liquor. Ninety per cent of serious accidents occur among men who drink. Not a single serious accident has happened to an employee who was a total abstainer, since our Compensation Law went into effect. We now discharge and refuse recommendation to an employee who comes to work Monday morning smelling of whiskey."

Mr. Z. Clark Thwing, vice president of the Grand Rapids Veneer Works, calls it "that industrial vampire, alcohol." He says: "We simply will not employ a man in any capacity who is even moderately intemperate, because under our State Workmen's Compensation Act the financial risk is too great. . . . The extension of the compensation laws throughout the country will, from a purely business standpoint, do more for the cause of temperance than is now generally supposed." He adds: "Your statement, 'The plain facts showing industrial inefficiency due to alcohol are so over whelming, they make rhetoric look cheap,' is altogether too tame. You should print them in letters of blood, for what one sees about the large cities is enough to make one hate the traffic with a hatred too deep to express."
